

371 Extra Credit

Not all functional requirements can be represented as use cases. This is because use cases require human interaction in the functionality. It is possible for a system to have automated systems, such as virus scanning, that require no human interaction unless something goes wrong.